IV. Role of SMAC in Future (C. Yensan)
   a. The Committee members had a general discussion about how SMAC should plug into the process of designing major renovation projects coming up, especially in academic buildings.
   b. P. Jones reinforced the involvement of SMAC in the process of repurposing buildings; committee’s exact role bares additional thought.
   c. Committee should be involved especially in situations of change of use such as when academic space is being converted into office and/or administrative support space vs. when academic space is being upgraded and remains as academic space.
   d. J. Raja suggested that it would be most beneficial to have the Committee focus on projects a building at a time instead of several smaller projects all at once. Impacted academic units are being provided with the opportunity to express what kind of space they need most.
   e. C. Yensan indicated that SMAC needs to think about when is the best time for the Committee to plug into projects so that input is beneficial and is timed so that it is not too early in the process, not to late or after-the-fact, and does not impede the progress of the process.
   f. Campus decisions that could potentially affect space needs should be discussed with SMAC to determine the necessity of decision and weigh benefits versus costs.
   g. Committee should be briefed on project planning so that representative members’ feedback can be expressed and factored into the process rather than added at the end. This also assists in making sure that the project is being viewed with an integrated perspective and connection to the strategic priorities of the institution, both of which can be provided by SMAC members.
   h. C. Yensan asked that Committee members give further thought to the role of SMAC in the future and the issue will be revisited at the November meeting.
